GERMANS REACH VERDUN, FRANCE

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

PARIS, Aug. 28.—The Germans have swallowed Longwy, the "iron gate to France," and like a vast avalanche are pouring 3,000,000 strong through Luxemburg and the famous gap of Treves.

Coming from Metz and Thionville, the Army of the Saar, commanded by Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, has joined the Moselle army under the Imperial Crown Prince Frederick William, and together these great

ENGLISH REPULSED IN MAUBEUGE BATTLE

LONDON, Aug. 28.—Premier Asquith announced in Parliament today that an engagement between the allied troops an dthe Germans had taken place on Wednesday.

"There were losses on both sides," he said. "The British were exposed to an attack by five German corps.

A German corps numbers 40,000 men.

The Premier stated that the battle took place near Cambrad. This town is about ninety miles from Paris. The brunt of the attack was borne by two British cavalry divisions, the reserve guard cavalry and the second division and by the British Second Army Corps. The main attack against these forces was made by the German cavalry, but at the same time the first British

Strong Forts on Vistula

The mouth of the Vistula River is 275 miles from Berlin. Near Bromberg the river makes a bend that brings it only 225 miles from Berlin. It is probable that the crossing referred to in the foregoing dispatch was at a point southwest of the mouth.

Along the banks of the Vistula lies a strong chain of German forts, constituting the most important of the Kaiser's eastern defences. The Russians have maintained that, once having crossed the Vistula, they could easily sweep on to Berlin.

That the Russians are making a most favorable advance into Prussia is indicated by a St. Petersburg dispatch, saying that the government stated today that everything unprejudicial to the welfare of the army and navy would be made public hereafter. This decision was reached on the advice of the highest naval, military and political authorities.

TO MARCH STRAIGHT TO BERLIN.

PARIS, Aug. 28.—Colonel Osnobichin, Russian military attache here, is quoted by the Journal as having said in an interview that he could say without indiscretion that other armies were about to invade Western Prussia. After crossing the Vistula, he said, the Russians would march straight to Berlin.

EMPEROR WILLIAM ALARMED.

BERLIN, via Copenhagen and London, Aug. 28.—Emperor William today telegraphed to the Council of Ministers to organize all possible relief at once for East Prussia, which is under invasion by the Russians.

BRITISH IN DESPERATE POSITION AS BATTLE RAGES IN NORTHEAST FRANCE

ENGLISH ARE FORCED TO CHANGE POSITION

By HERBERT TEMPLE.
Staff Correspondent of the American.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—Having smashed the first line defence of the Franco-British allied army, the advance guard of the Germans has pushed beyond Lille, in France, bending southward in the direction of Paris.

The invaders are believed to be assaulting the strongly entrenched position of the British and French along the left wing and further fighting is also reported from the centre, where the Kaiser's host is trying to batter its way through the Franco-British position stretching southeastward near Maubuge.

Censored dispatches, which filtered through from the continent today, told of hard fighting, and indicated that the British would send a strong expeditionary force to Ostend, with a view to attacking the German right wing in the rear. There are said to be 5,000 British marines at Ostend to hold the Belgian port city until the land forces arrive.

Late telegrams indicated that the Germans had not occupied Lille, though there was little doubt that they held the key to the city and were in a position to take possession if they desired.

A significant dispatch to the Times from its correspondent at Boulogne says:

"It is asserted that German troops, presumably cavalry, broke through the French lines near Arras in the French department of Pas de Calais. The French moved up with rapidity, it is declared, and have the situation well in hand. The allied troops are being swiftly arranged to deal with any further attempt to break through the allied line between Dunkirk and Lille."

BRITISH CHANGE POSITION.

In its official statement issued by the government press bureau at 12:30 o'clock this morning, it is stated that "the French operations over a distance of some 250 miles have necessitated certain changes in the position of the British troops who are now occupying a strong line to meet the German advance.

This makes plain that the Germans in northeastern France are on the offensive, and it fits in with the following paragraph from the bulletin issued late last night by the French War Office in Paris:

"In the north the British have attacked forces greatly superior in number and were obliged, after a brilliant resistance, to withdraw a little in the rear of their right."

The movement of the English troops, it would seem, was in the nature of a retreat.

Much anxiety is apparent over the situation in northeastern France, the Chronicle speaking of it as "exceedingly critical." Again it says: "The Germans are moving very rapidly. Their mobility is surprising. There is still ground, however, for the hope that the German advance may be repelled."

2,000,000 IN BATTLE.

At their extreme left, in the rugged country west of the Vosges mountains, the Germans are admittedly making progress. But interest is directed more strongly to the operations along the Belgian frontier where the British forces are stationed. There is every indication of furious fighting along the line stretching from the northwestern border of the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg on French soil to a point near Lille. A number of correspondents begin their dispatches from the front with the words:

"Another great battle is on."

Along the battle front approximately 2,000,000 fighting men are massed with their supports of the heaviest artillery ever known. Some of the great German siege guns hurl shells a foot in diameter.

army corps was being assailed on the right. "Heavy losses were inflicted on the enemy," said the Premier, "but the exact numbers were not known."

The Premier concluded by saying:

"The behavior of the troops was excellent."

By FREDERICK WERNER,
Staff correspondent of the American.

BERLIN, via Copenhagen and London, Aug. 28.—Official announcement was made here today of the defeat of the English at Maubeuge, in France. The War Office stated that the English troops were retreating, but that the forces of General Von Kluk were in hot pursuit and threatening to surround them.

The following details of German successes were also announced:

Troops led by General Von Buelow and General Von Hausen crushed the combined Franco-Belgian forces of about eight corps near Namur along the Meuse River and Sambre River.

The battle lasted several days, but the Belgians and French were forced to flee and are now being pursued to the eastward of Maubeuge.

The attack on the British forces at Maubeuge was opened by Grand Duke Albrecht of Wurtemburg. The British troops resisted stoutly, but were finally driven across the Semois River.

The army led by the Crown Prince (Frederick William) is advancing toward the Meuse.

French troops are reported by the Crown Prince of Bavaria (Rupprecht) to be attacking his forces from the direction of Nancy and the south.

The campaign in the Vosges is being conducted by General Von Heeringen, who is pressing southward. Defeat of the Belgians in their sortie from Antwerp was announced as follows:

Four Belgian divisions attacking from Antwerp on Tuesday and Wednesday were defeated. We took a number of guns and many prisoners. The Belgian population is participating in the fighting, making it necessary to adopt strong measures of repression."

It was also announced that the corps of the last reserve had been called out to prevent interference with communication throughout the empire.

GERMAN CAVALRY PLAYS BIG PART IN WAR, SAYS EXPERT

(Special war dispatches of the Boston American and the London Daily Telegraph.)

By ASHMEADE BARTLETT.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—Every day it becomes increasingly difficult to understand what is happening along the French frontier. 4 cols

The news which filters through is vague and contradictory; all information concerning the positions of the French main armies of the north is rigorously suppressed. How is it that the allies have been so badly served by aeroplane service, if it is true, as officially reported, that the united strength of the German army took the French general staff completely by surprise when they attempted an abortive forward movement on Sunday from Chimay to Charleroi?

How is it that absolutely nothing is definitely known concerning the strength of the German right wing, which is only held back by the tremendous resistance of the British army?

Why has the German cavalry been allowed an absolutely free hand to overrun the whole of Belgium and the north of France, thus causing something like a panic and, perhaps, forcing the withdrawal of the Allies' left wing?

What has become of the masses of French cavalry, on which so much reliance was placed, and whose brilliant operations have been the feature of all their manoeuvers of recent years?

Continuous German cavalry raids and an immense screen of horsemen have concealed the movements of the main armies since they entered Belgium without any corresponding effort on the part of the French cavalry to check them.

FEARFUL CARNAGE AT NAMUR AS GERMANS USE 11-INCH SIEGE GUNS

By LAWRENCE ELSTON.
Staff Correspondent of the American.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—From dispatches received today from Ostend is gleaned the thrilling story of the battle at Namur.

"The Germans began an artillery attack on the forts and the town in a dense fog," said a dispatch which quoted one of the Belgian survivors, "and for nearly two days they poured a steady rain of shells into the open town and upon the forts, silencing some of the forts and creating horrible carnage in the city. Some of the dramatic features of the battle came after it had raged for more than thirty-six hours. The One Hundred and Forty-eighth French Regiment of the line coming from Givet, marched into town to the tune of the "Marseillaise." Shot and shell fell all around them, but they were unmindful of the fact that any moment their lives might be snuffed out.

"The French soldiers, alas, arrived too late. They insisted upon a continued defence of the town, but the Belgian garrison was worn out and many of the Belgian soldiers in the city had been wounded or killed. There was nothing to do but retreat, but this was done with as much dispatch and orderliness as possible. Some of our men, however, fell into the hands of the Germans.

"The shells used by the Germans in their attack on the forts were the largest that were ever used in battle, according to a corps of French engineers, who were in the regiment that walked into the city under the murderous hail.

"The German marksmanship was wonderful. Few of their shots went wild, even though the gunners had to aim at nothing but a thick fog. The Germans used 11-inch siege guns. Forts Marchovellette and Cognelee, at which the Germans directed the first attack with their huge guns were silenced quickly."

WAR BULLETINS

REPORTS GERMANS LOST 60,000 IN 3 DAYS.

PARIS, Aug. 28.—A wounded zouave officer who arrived here today estimated the German losses in the three-day battle of Charleroi at 60,000 killed and wounded.

"The German artillery produced terrific explosions," he said, "but did little damage. The French artillery fire was deadly.

"Whole ranks of Germans were mowed down by shrapnel."

AUSTRIAN TORPEDO BOAT SUNK.

ROME, Aug. 28.—Four Austrian cruisers and eight torpedo boats steamed into the Gulf of Cattaro yesterday. Two torpedo boats started to bombard Budua, Dalmatia, the southernmost town of Austro-Hungary, which the Montenegrians have occupied. A dispatch from Cettinje, Montenegro, says that officers of the Austrian cruiser Zenta, which the allied fleet sunk, acknowledge that a torpedo boat was sent to the bottom in the same engagement.

forces have struck and overwhelmed the French advance posts.

They have already reached Verdun. They have already come in contact with the corps that centre there. The fall of Longwy after a heroic defence lasting more than three weeks cleared the way for their advance.

NOTE—The exclusive news of the German advance upon Longwy was sent last week from Paris by Mr. Merrick. That he learned of it more than two weeks after the siege began shows the secrecy which is maintained as to military operations in France.

The Moselle army holds the towns of Villerupt, Longuyon, Jeppecourt, Audun-le-Roman, Briey and probably Montmedy. Its cavalry has crossed the river Chiera toward Meuse.

Behind the Meuse, between Verdun and Sedan, lies a great French force and the most powerful artillery that has ever been made. All bridges across the Meuse have been destroyed and the German forces will have to hit the French with terrific force in order to break through and join the army of the Meuse, which is operating in the direction of Lille.

TO MOVE FRENCH CAPITAL.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—A letter received from Paris by a high government official says that preparations are being made to move the French government to Bordeaux. Preparations for a siege continue in Paris.

ERUPTION ON CHILD'S SHOULDER

When Four Months Old. Clothing Irritated. Restless and Fretful. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Eczema Was Gone.

Lincolnville, Me.—"My little girl was about four months old when I first began to notice little white blisters just below her shoulder. It began to become worse and the blisters seemed to break and run together. When they broke it would make a raw sore and then she would have terrible crying spells. The blisters filled with water. She was not old enough to scratch herself but when I rubbed it she would stop crying and keep perfectly quiet. Her clothing seemed to irritate it and she would be restless and fretful. She also had a real scurvy head.

"I was told it was eczema and I tried everything but it did no good. One day a friend of mine told me to get a cake of Cuticura Soap and box of Cuticura Ointment. It was not a week before I noticed she was much better. If she began to cry I would undress her and put Cuticura Ointment on her chest which would stop her crying at once. I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointments six weeks and the eczema was gone. She has never been bothered since." (Signed) Mrs. A. C. Haslam, Jan. 31, 1914.

LONDON TIMES IN WAR SUMMARY SAYS ALLIES HAVE FALLEN BACK 10 MILES

TELLS FRENCH TO KEEP COOL AND CONTEST EVERY INCH

By GEORGES CLEMENCEAU,
Former Premier of France.

PARIS, Aug. 28.—We must keep cool and contest every inch of ground which will exhaust the enemy on French territory, whilst England and Russia strike elsewhere. Lord Kitchener says for six or seven months he will continue sending us troops, if necessary.

We don't lack soldiers. The French people are not vanquished. Its valor and endurance are not exhausted.

"SITUATION AT SEA MORE SATISFACTORY"

LONDON, Aug. 28.—The London Times summarizes the war situation as follows:

There is, for the moment, no satisfactory clue to the riddle of the frontiers.

Sir John French, in a message read in the House of Commons by the Prime Minister, said that British troops engaged on Wednesday against a superior German force, fought splendidly. He also expressed the confidence that the prospects of the army in the impending battle were satisfactory.

The natural conclusion from this is that at least on the left wing of the allies there has been no general engagement since Sunday night.

Announcement of the casualties sustained is still delayed. It is clear, however, that the allied forces as a whole has retired to a position fifteen miles further behind the French frontier where it was understood to have made a stand after the first big encounter Saturday and Sunday.

On the high seas, the position is far more satisfactory. The German armed merchantman Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, which has been endeavoring to intercept British steamers enroute from the Cape, has been sunk by a British cruiser. The admiralty has sent the following message to the cruiser:

"Bravo! You have rendered a service, not only to Great Britain, but to the peaceful commerce of the world."

German mines have been placed in enormous numbers in the North Sea, but so far they have done damage only to neutral shipping. A Danish trawler and a Norwegian trading steamer have been blown up with some loss of life.

The Times, which is noted for its superlative degree, battling desperately to preserve her border from the invading Teuton, seems to have failed to grasp the lesson of the Boer War that variegated uniforms of bright color, while inspiring, are not practical.

PART OF GERMAN PLAN.

While this war will not be won or lost through uniforms, still the German "invisible gray" is a part of Teutonic thoroughness and grasp of detail.

It has even been reported from London that some of the German cavalry horses were painted dull green over every inch of their bodies so that black or white or roan horseflesh would not show conspicuously on the march.

That "painted horse" story has yet to be confirmed, but it is known that the modern artillery has its camouflage and civilians painted "the colors of the leaves as one witness describes them."

Another correspondent, who saw the 1st Bavarian Corps at Brussels, received considerable advice to worship the peculiar, fog-like appearance of the uniformed ranks. He said: "The color is not a gray nor yet is it a blue gray. It is a color of unmolested steel — the color of mist among the trees."

The writer added that the color seems to win following hat, as a function of the years, one could see them in which Uhlans were riding through the trees, but could not see the Uhlans themselves in their fog like uniform.

FRENCH A SHOT OF COLOR.

But the French soldiers—a riot of color.

Although England picked up khaki in India, then adopted a drab shade of it for use in South Africa, although the United States has its olive drab service uniform, although Russia, Austria and Italy have adopted the tones, the French War Department continues to send its men out to fight in bright colors.

The French line infantry, on service, is uniformed in blue tunics, with red collars and red epaulettes, while the trousers are of varying shades of blue.

The chasseur battalions wear blue tunics and gray-blue trousers, with yellow stripes.

The Zouaves—one of the most daring and picturesque of military figures—collide into battle in blue jacket, trimmed with red, and baggy red trousers. Those Turcos, Senegalese troops, charged here and there over the battlefield, appear like the Zouaves, except in the matter of color. Instead of blue and red, they wear white.

Before the war, cavalry troops wear blue tunics and red trousers and even under steel helmets with horsehair plumes, these uniforms made them look fine and formidable and also distinctive, as did plaids for Germany marksmen.

COLOR A HANDICAP.

Thus the French soldier, if he conserve the enemy, does so in spite of his uniform, not because of it.

Great Britain makes hard on Germany's scientific horn in reducing her uniforms to the vanishing point. Ever since the Boer War the British attempt to wear one sort of uniform costume on active service has been abandoned. The rigid requirements of infantry fire brought this about.

The old British regimental gaze way to a khaki-clad soldier for India toward the close of the last century. Then khaki was gradually adopted until a drab mixture was developed for service dress.

Now the British Tommy Atkins, when on active service, with his drab suit and peaked cap looks and looks American regular forces. The cloth is a Khaki serge. The pattern suits for a shooting coat, with a close up in the middle of the back, four large pockets, with buttons and badges in bronze.

(Tomorrow's article will be on "Speeding Up the War With the Automobile.")

'Invisible Uniforms' Great Aid to German Warriors

Among the many wonderful features of the German army is the German service uniform, which is in a steel gray color so cunningly devised that the wearer blends with foliage, sky, grass or earth and becomes as part of it.

They call it the "invisible uniform" from the way it makes the soldier almost beyond perception in road or woods.

Officially it is described as a greenish-gray, or a field gray. It is the shade selected, after numerous tests by German color experts, as the one least apt to be noticed in a campaign.

It is the highest development or a general effort among the Powers to get an unistinguishable uniform—all the Powers except France.

La Belle France, gallant to the superlative degree, battling desperately to preserve her border from the invading Teuton, seems to have failed to grasp the lesson of the Boer War that variegated uniforms of bright color, while inspiring, are not practical.

"I never knew you were a public benefactor before," I answered.

"But," Bill asks, "haven't I preached 'safety first' for years by advising everybody to drink only

Hampden Ale

"You're right, I agree." Bill went on—

"Doesn't Hampden safeguard your health by its body-building goodness?"

"Sure."

"Doesn't it safeguard your disposition by tuning up your muscles and sharpening your appetite?"

"Sure."

"And doesn't it safeguard your comfort by quenching your thirst and soothing you with its mellow, rich flavor?"

"Sure."

"Well then," says Bill, "I see no reason why we shouldn't have all these 'Safety First' signs changed to read 'Hampden First—for safety.'"

And he opened another bottle of Hampden and let it gurgle into a couple of glasses.

It pays to say Hampden. Try it now, over the telephone, to your dealer.

EXPERT SEES COLLAPSE OF FRENCH DEFENSE

By COLONEL REPINGTON.
Military Expert of the Boston American and London Daily Times.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—News that the allied armies in the north of France have retired to the line of Le Cateau and Cambrai shows that the active defence of the line of Lille and Maubeuge has been abandoned and that these two fortresses have been left temporarily to look after themselves.

It is disappointing after the long notice given of the direction of the main German attack, that the valuable defensive properties of line at Lille and Maubeuge have not been utilized and cannot now be taken advantage of.

The numerous river lines and inundations which might have been prepared on the Scarpe and Scheldt, and the forests which might so easily have been obstructed to limit the enemy's advance, have all gone. Ypuhan must turn to in his grave, for his successors have not known how to replace the Celtiure Defer by defences suitable to modern war.

The necessity for holding the interval between the River Scheldt at Cambrai and the Sambre near Le Cateau is probably due to the need which the French higher command experiences for holding on grimly to Mezieres. Once this point goes, or the Meuse between Mezieres and Verdun is penetrated by the invaders, the whole system of frontier defence of eastern France breaks down.

If the field armies are or believe themselves to be inferior to their enemy, nothing remains but a retreat to the Falaises de Champagne. This Falaises or downs extends from Joigny, near Auxerre on the Yonne in the south, through Troyes, Vitry-le-Francois and Laon to La Fer. The natural continuation northwestward is the line on the Somme.

If all this is occupied betimes and skilfully defended with the campaign of 1814 in mind, it should be most difficult to penetrate on this line. La Fere Laon and Reims are provided with permanent fortifications, but we are not at that point yet.

The line from Le Cateau to Cambrai is doubtless extended on the right through Nouvin and Hirson to the little River Sormonne, which forms a natural ditch in this section of the frontier and unites with the Meuse at Mezieres.

BRITISH SOLDIERS RELATE STIRRING BATTLE STORIES

LONDON, Aug. 28.—The Daily Mail prints the following dispatch containing stories of incidents in which British soldiers in Belgium figured:

"Some curious rumors have been current in the British lines. One of the English soldiers told a correspondent that the Russians had reached Berlin, and were driving the Germans onto the British lines so that they could be crumpled up.

"This report may have been purposely circulated among the British to inspire them."

Continuing the dispatch says:

"Some of the British soldiers were highly irritated because they did not see enough fighting. One said: 'I hardly saw a German. I saw one German sentryman marching through a village and he began talking to me, saying something that I could not understand. What did I do but up with my bayonet and punked it right through his body before he could snap his fingers. I would do it again, too.'"

BAYONETS EFFECTIVE.

A Fusilier told this story of fighting in a colliery town near Charleroi:

"It was mostly desultory fighting, but there was a stirring bayonet charge by the English. The Germans don't like that sort of thing. They quit the neighborhood as soon as it starts. One time we ran up within seeing distance of a huge mass of the enemy in close formation. Our machine guns did them up properly. When we got them like that they don't ask for two helpings."

One of the hussars spoke enthusiastically of the work of the British artillery:

SHELLS BIG AS BUCKETS.

"There was one battery, or rather half a battery, that did a lot of damage to the Germans, so the Germans trained several batteries upon it in an endeavor to silence it. It was like one David fighting half a dozen Goliaths, for the German guns were those big Krupps that threw a shell as big as a bucket.

"You have to say this for those German gunners, that they could shoot. One by one the English cannon were silenced until there was only a single gun remaining, manned by a single artilleryman. He went on working while the ponderous shrapnel from those German cannon kept plowing up the ground, nearly burying him beneath clouds of dirt. Well, the Britisher would have kept on until he dropped, but an officer called him back, and he went back unwillingly, too."

Austria Declares War on Belgium

ROME, Aug. 28.—A dispatch from Vienna says that Austria has declared war on Belgium. The Austrian declaration of war, according to this dispatch, was accompanied by the explanation that Austria was going to war because the Belgians were giving assistance to England and France.

The telegram adds that the American minister in Belgium will look after the interests of Austria.

Germany Prods U. S. for Wireless Reply

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—A protest against the delay of the United States in replying to the German inquiries concerning the wireless censorship was filed with Secretary of State Bryan today by Count von Bernstorff. The German ambassador told Secretary Bryan that the German government at Berlin desires immediate action in this matter by the United States.

Upon leaving the State Department, Count von Bernstorff commented on the Belgian protest concerning the bombardment of Antwerp by a Zeppelin airship by stating that on the first day of the war, before the Germans had even requested permission to cross neutral Belgium, four French aeroplanes sailed over Belgium and bombarded Coblenz, thus establishing a precedent for any German aerial manoeuvres which might follow.

GERARD'S HEROISM PRAISED BY BRITISH ENVOY TO BERLIN

Special Cable to the American.

London, Aug. 29.

On a white paper, issued by the British government, Sir Edward Goschen, the former British Ambassador at Berlin, pays the following warm tribute to United States Ambassador Gerard of New York:

"I should like to mention the great assistance rendered to us all by my American colleague, Mr. Gerard, and his staff.

"Undeterred by the hooting and hissing with which he was often greeted by the mob on entering and leaving the Embassy, His Excellency came repeatedly to see me to ask me how he could help us to make arrangements for the safety of stranded British subjects.

"He extricated many of these from extremely difficult situations, AT SOME PERSONAL RISK TO HIMSELF. His calmness and savoir faire and his firmness in dealing with the imperial authorities gave full assurance that THE PROTECTION OF BRITISH SUBJECTS AND INTERESTS COULD NOT HAVE BEEN LEFT IN MORE EFFICIENT AND ABLE HANDS."

RUSSIANS TAKE VAST QUANTITY OF STORES

RIGA, Russia, via St. Petersburg and London, Aug. 28.—The Russian military authorities announce the capture of an immense amount of the spoils of war from the Germans at Tilsit.

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY,
Staff correspondent of the American.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 28.—Advancing rapidly through Galicia, a Russian army has attacked Lemberg, capital of the Austrian province, according to word from the general staff today. Three Austrian army corps, 120,000 men, is opposing the Russian army about Lemberg, but the War Office states that "all goes well with the Russian troops."

Russian aeroplanes are flying over Lemberg and learning the disposition of the forces there.

The occupation of Tilsit was confirmed in another official announcement which also stated that Russian forces had defeated the Austrians at Tomaszow, in Russian Poland, sixty-five miles from Krasnik.

The Russian army that is moving southwest in Galicia, says the general staff, has beaten the Austrians at Monasterzysko and crossed the Dneister without difficulty.

Lemberg is the most important military station of the Austrians in Galicia. The surrounding district is rugged and will undoubtedly prove difficult, but the Russians will not suffer the trouble there that they met in Eastern Prussia.

The difficulties which nature had placed in the way of the Russians were enormously multiplied by the Germans. Numerous rifle pits were dug, formidable redoubts were built of trees and these were strengthened by barbed wire entaglements. In the face of these obstacles the Russian troops charged with the bayonet and swept the Germans from their strongholds.

Inhabitants of the region about Marienberg have been ordered by the German commandant to leave, while at Elbing the sluices were opened to flood the country and thus hamper the Russian advance. These two developments indicate the terror spread by the Russian advance.

So confident are the Russians that their troops will enter Berlin within a short time that a fund is already being raised to reward the first soldier that goes into the German capital.

The contributions range from 100 rubles to two rubles, rich and poor doing their share. One hundred thousand dollars has already been raised.

Scores of German prisoners who have been taken to Vilna are refusing to eat food that has been cooked because of stories circulated in the British army that the Russians poisoned all prisoners.

Microbes highly magnified: many are only 1/25,000 of an inch long. In one day, one microbe can multiply into 17,000,000.

At least 1,200,000 people died in this country last year

The death of most could have been prevented—the average age at death was only about 35 years.

THE greatest weapon of Death is the germ—not shot, nor shell, nor sword.

Because we do not see these invisible organisms, we do not realize how many thousands of them are attacking our bodies all the time.

It is only when they get the better of us, when they take the breath of life from our little ones—only then do we begin faintly to realize the actions of these murderous organisms.

We stand aghast when we hear of a few thousand people being killed in battle.

We do not realize that a few thousand people are being killed unnecessarily in this country every day.

If 1,000,000 men are killed in the European War, it will be considered the most horrible carnage in the history of the world.

And yet over one million two hundred thousand people died in this country alone last year—and it is a scientific fact that most of the deaths could have been prevented.

Most of these people were killed by the direct action of germs. They did not die of old age. They did not die from so-called "natural causes." They died because germs attacked them. The average age at death was only about thirty-five years.

What is still more appalling, it is an undoubted fact that at least one million more people will die this year—and the death of most of them, too, can be prevented.

If you value your life, and the lives of your children, take ordinary precautions against germs. Science has given us means to fight them.

That thousands are killed in battle is no more uncivilized—considering the present state of our knowledge—than that tens of thousands should be killed by tiny little organisms 1/25,000 of an inch in length.

Simple Health Precautions

Always have a disinfectant in the house, preferably one endorsed by medical authorities.

With every pail of water used in scrubbing or mopping, pour in a few drops of disinfectant.

Disinfect the water closet bowl regularly.

Disinfect the garbage pail regularly and all refuse piles and manure heaps.

Sprinkle a solution wherever vermin collect—waterbugs, roaches, ants, bugs, etc.

Immediately cleanse and bandage all small cuts, bites, scratches, wounds, sores, burns, etc.

These are only a few of the most necessary uses of a disinfectant and germicide. There are several good preparations on the market. Many, however, are worthless, as has been shown in a bulletin of the United States Public Health and Marine Hospital Service. If you decide to use Sylpho-Nathol, an interesting little book comes with every package, telling scores of uses which few people know of.

STOP LAW IN CLIMB UP SIDE OF BACON BLOCK

Rodman Law, the daring young steeplejack and aviator, who last week successfully scaled the bare sides of the Flatiron Building in New York, today started to climb to the top of the W. & A. Bacon Company's building, corner of Washington and Essex streets, when he was stopped by the police.

Clad in his shirtsleeves and collarless, his blond hair flying in the wind, young Law rubbed some resin on his hands and shoes and started to walk up the Washington street side of the building by way of the high pressure water pipe. He reached the fire escape without mishap and slowly wormed his way along the treacherous ledge at the third floor.

Below a great crowd quickly gathered and watched the spectacle with bated breath. Young Law nonchalantly stopped mid-way around the building and lighted a cigarette. Then he proceeded to scale the fourth story from a point near the corner of the building.

The police, meanwhile, got busy and going to the third floor of the building commanded young Law to stop. He obeyed and entered the building through a nearby window.

The police took him into custody. They told him that they would release him on the one condition that he would take the next train out of town. As he had an engagement at a Brooklyn theatre late this afternoon, he agreed to obey the authorities and left for New York on the 10 o'clock train. He was accompanied by his sister, Miss Ruth E. Law.

Together they will be the principal drawing card at the big Rockingham Fair, next week, at Salem, N. H., where Rodman Law will jump from a soaring aeroplane driven by his sister.

WILEY RULES FAVORITE TO RETAIN BIKE TITLE IN 50-MILE BEACH RACE

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

FOUR FEATURE MATCHES ON CARD IN TITLE TENNIS TOURNEY AT NEWPORT TODAY

UMPIRE ROBS BRAVES OF GAME IN ST. LOUIS

For the second time within as many days, the Braves have been the victims of vicious rulings by National League umpires which have robbed them of the lead in the great pennant race now being fought in the National League.

The two decisions, while not rendered by the same umpire, not in the same city or series, make it appear to the average Boston ball fan that it is not a matter of misjudgment which prompts the umpires against the Braves but a part of plot to keep Boston out.

The following story of yesterday's game between the Cards and the Braves by one of the best known baseball writers in St. Louis bears out the feeling among fans that the umpires are in league to rob the fighting Braves.

By SID G. KEENER.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 28.—If they could protest a ball game owing to the inefficiency of an umpire then Manager George Stallings could have a decided row on Hill Byron, who dressed in umpire togs, called an umpire and all of that, but that's all.

Byron absolutely refused to call yesterday's game on account of darkness at the end of the ninth inning when the score was 2 to 2.

It was so dark, that occupants of the bleachers burned bits of paper to follow the direction of the ball. Still Byron insisted upon a finish and with darkness on hand, so dark, that not an outfielder could view the plate, the Cardinals won the game in the tenth, advanced to second place and the Braves dropped a peg.

Here is what happened:

Magee lined to right field, but Deberry could not see the ball, and Lee was awarded with a single. Next followed Johns, who hit the ball to left.

IMPOSSIBLE TO SEE BALL.

It was impossible for Connolly to see the ball. He didn't. It hopped past him and Magee completed the circuit for the winning run of a 3 to 2 finish.

At the end of the sixth inning the Braves pleaded with Byron to stop the game when it was raining. He refused. At the end of the ninth the two sides pleaded to stop the game on account of darkness. He refused.

The defeat of the Braves probably lends the impression that George Stallings hustlers are weakening and cracking. They didn't show any signs of it.

It wasn't bad baseball that beat them, it was Byron's bullheaded disposition and nothing else.

Three more games will be played here and Manager Stallings is confident that he will get back in second place before he quits the West Sunday night.

He will call Bill James and Southpaw Hess for the game tomorrow. Tyler will get the call here for the final game Sunday.

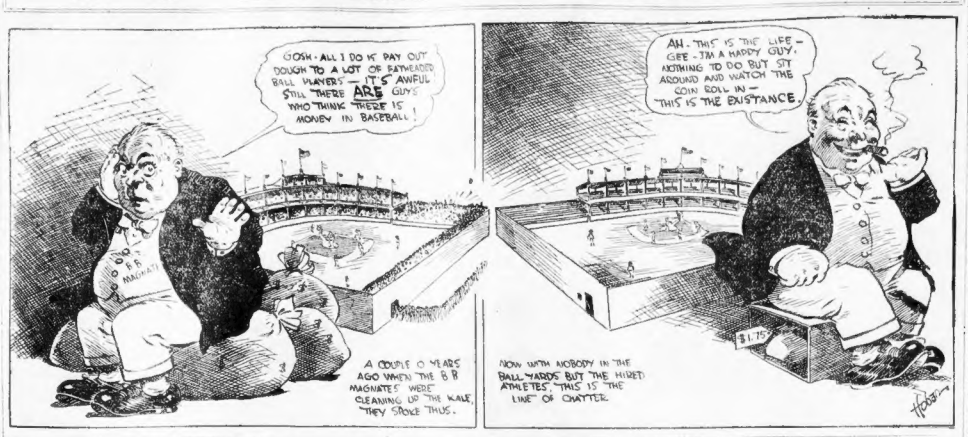
RECORD CROWD LOOKED FOR.

But the Braves will encounter superb twirling, too, because Manager Huggins has Perritt, who hasn't pitched since last Sunday, with Sallee or Doak tomorrow and maybe Perdue again Sunday.

A record crowd is expected for the Sunday tilt. Twenty-seven thousand five hundred saw the doubleheader with the Giants, which is a record for attendance in St. Louis.

Not since the grand old game was introduced years and years ago has there ever been a 27,500 gathering on a week day. The Sunday record is 29,000.

HOW TIMES HAVE CHANGED



GOSH · ALL I DO IS PAY OUT DOUGH TO A LOT OF FATHEADED BALL PLAYERS — IT'S AWFUL STILL THERE ARE SOME GUYS WHO THINK THERE IS MONEY IN BASEBALL!
A COUPLE O' YEARS AGO WHEN THE B B MAGNATES WERE CLEANING UP THE KALE THEY SPOKE THUS.
AH · THIS IS THE LIFE — GEE · I'M A HAPPY GUY. NOTHING TO DO BUT SIT AROUND AND WATCH THE COIN ROLL IN — THIS IS THE EXISTANCE.
NOW WITH NOBODY IN THE BALL YARDS BUT THE HIRED ATHLETES THIS IS THE LINE OF CHATTER.

STORM PUTS OVER BRAVES GAME: PLAY CARDS TWICE TOMORROW

By NICK FLATLEY.

Rain today caused the postponement of the second Braves-Cardinals game and the two teams will probably play a doubleheader tomorrow.

It's a case of up again down again with the Braves sure enough again these days. Yesterday was one of the down afternoons, and as a result the Stallings starts are now in third place, a game and a half back of the Giants and half a contest worse off than the Cardinals.

But in their downfall yesterday there was plenty of room for hope for the faithful, who can see nothing but a pennant for Boston. The game, like most of the losses the Climbers have suffered out along the trails, was a matter of hard luck. A home run whack is always a chance happening, and it was two homers that gave the Cardinals yesterday's game. Until he tired a bit down toward the end, Dick Rudolph pitched just as good baseball as ever he has this season.

Big Bill James and Otto Hess are due to take a shot at the Cardinals tomorrow. William showed Tuesday that he was back on the job, after his lapse into defeat a short time before, and with him officiating the Braves are just about due to get back on the winning end.

CAN REGAIN SECOND PLACE.

By winning they can help oust the Cardinals again, and scramble past the Giants, provided the Cubs turn the tables on the McGraws.

This latter happening is a very strong possibility, as Demaree, who has not pitched a good game for so long that even the people in Gotham have lost track of the date, is the only Medical regular left to go out on the firing line. Matty and the "Rube" seized their share Monday in the double-header against the Cardinals, while Tearcan, after his performance yesterday, must have a few days' rest.

For the O'Day outfit, Jimmy Lavender, who has had a whole lot to do with the surprising ascension of the Chicago cripples, is listed to face the champions, for whom he has always proved the toughest kind of nut.

Even though the Braves have dropped three out of their last four, they still are playing just as good baseball as ever, and there is not a sign of a slump here, there or anywhere.

BREAKS AGAINST CLIMBERS.

The breaks in the game have been coming the way of the Cardinals for quite some time now, and it's only according to the law of averages that there should be a turn. And against the course of fortune shifts a bit, the Braves naturally will lose a few tough games.

They're still in the running, very much so. A game and a half is merely a matter of two days' playing at the most, and there's as much confidence in the camp as ever there was. The fact that the team will head for the East and the home grounds after the St. Louis series is also likely to act as a great encourager and set the fighting players out to make their 2nd record worthy of the reception that they are certain to get in this neck of the woods.

Though the Cubs did drop back a game from the Giants, the little old game is still knotted up as tight as could be wished, with the O'Days merely a matter of three and a half battles behind the leaders.

THE FACTS IN FIGURES.

It looks like this in figures:

	W.	L.	Behind Leader
Giants	61	49
Cardinals	61	54	1 game
Braves	51	51	1½ games
Cubs	60	55	3½ games

Any one of the quartet is still a very dangerous contender, and the team that can hold the pace right down to the wire will be the one that will come across the line in front.

The fact that the Chicago fracas drew no suspensions was a mighty good thing for the Braves and the Cubs as well. With the three star infielders sitting on the bench, or rather in the grandstand, the Climbers would have had a mighty slight chance with the Cardinals, while Zimm absent from the Cub lineup would have made the giant corpse in the Windy City so much the easier.

President Tener showed very good judgment, at that, in letting the fighting teams go it with their full playing strength, even though a strict interpretation of the laws of the game's dignity might have led him to resort to stricter measures.

The shift in the Brave lineup, made for yesterday's game, while it did not bring across a victory, looks on paper to give the team a much better balanced offensive strength than formerly it had.

Gilbert, a three hundred hitter before the hurt in his knee, is surely due to get back his batting eye very shortly, while Maranville and Gowdy down at the foot of the list, following Schmidt and Smith, present a line of battle that is likely at any time to wreck any sort of a ball game.

Though the Braves have been losing more often than is their wont of late, the local interest is still seething. The fact that the games in St. Louis do not get under way till 4:30, Boston time, and are seldom over till well after 6, causes thousands of Brave boosters to head for home before ascertaining just what happened to their pets.

This accounts for the entirely unprecedented number of phone calls that keep the newspaper sport departments on the jump in the early evening hours of these tense baseball days.

The first fall was won by Ketonan in 22 minutes 20 seconds, with a body scissors and hammer lock, and he won the second fall in 10 minutes 30 seconds with an upright crotch hold.

Drew Will Not Run in Championships

President A. J. Lill, Jr., of the N. A. A. U., announced that Howard Drew, the great colored sprinter, will not compete in the national or New England championships. President Lill says he tried to show Drew where he would be doing the proper thing to compete in the championships. Drew could not agree with him, so it is a settled fact that Drew will not be seen in those meetings. He told President Lill that he would leave for Los Angeles, September 10.

BRAVES BATTLE HARD TO MAKE UP FOR LOST GROUND IN CUB AND CARDS GAMES

MIKE GIBBON S AND CHIP MAY SIGN FOR BOUT

By JACK CONWAY.

MIKE GIBBONS, who has been increasing his bank account by receiving large guarantees for bouts with second and third raters, has finally come out into the open and made a reply to the numerous challenges which have been hurled at him by George Chip, the Pittsburgh middleweight with the big punch. Gibbons declares that he will be perfectly willing to clash with Chip in a ten-round bout in New York, provided that Jimmy Dime's protege is successful in his twenty-round tussle with Billy Murray, which will be staged in California on September 5.

Tom McCarey and Jimmy Coffroth, California's leading flstic promoters, have both attempted to arrange a match between Chip and Gibbons to be decided over the Derby route, Gibbons, however, does not look upon the twenty-round game with favor, and says that he will refuse to battle Chip in anything but a ten-round whirl.

Chip is not very hard to please. Consequently he will probably journey East after his encounter with Murray and will be prepared to entertain Gibbons in a New York ring in October or November.

CHIP and Gibbons are two of the leading contenders for the dear old middleweight championship which has been kicked around by a score of fighters since Stanley Ketchel met his untimely death. Chip claimed the title by virtue of his victories over Frank Klaus, who was considered the king of the middleweights until he ran against one of Chip's right-hand punches. Klaus asserted that Chip's win was a fluke. The winner gave him a return match and repeated his feat again.

CHIP later met Al McCoy, a third-rater from Brooklyn, and was knocked out. McCoy has never been taken seriously by fight "fans," and his defeat of Chip was probably caused by a chance blow. He never did anything wonderful before he met Chip, and he has not startled us by his work within the hemp ropes since he flattened the conqueror of Klaus. He has refused to meet Chip again, as he probably realizes that he would receive a severe setback.

MCOY engaged in two bouts with Billy Murray of California, who came East heralded as a second Ketchel. Murray did not experience much trouble in beating the "champion" in two-round tussles in New York. The bouts were unsatisfactory affairs and Murray was compelled to return to California or else remain idle. Mac was matched with Gibbons and was knocked out in fifteen rounds.

GIBBONS will have an advantage over Chip in a ten-round contest, as he is a remarkable clever boxer, and should be able to outpoint the hard-hitting Pittsburgh man for ten sessions. It might be a different story in a twenty-round struggle, where Chip's aggressive fighting and deadly wallop would be able to play a more important part in deciding the battle.

EDDIE MURPHY is confident that he will win back the New England lightweight championship when he meets Matty Baldwin in a twelve-round bout at the Atlas A. A. next Tuesday night. Murphy won the championship by defeating Baldwin a year ago, but he was beaten by Gilbert Gallant early this Summer. Gallant was then vanquished by Baldwin. Murphy and Baldwin have already met twice. The first battle resulted in a draw, while Murphy breezed in a winner in the second encounter.

THE South Boston boy's speed and ring science have always enabled him to carry Baldwin along at a merry clip. Eddie is boxing in good form again, as he proved in his recent bout with Gilbert Gallant, which was declared a draw after twelve rounds of rugged fighting.

GILBERT GALLANT will bury a challenge at the winner. The Chelsea boy has already won one decision in his credit over Murphy, while he gave Baldwin two hard fights. Gallant is now training for a twenty-round contest with Chick West of Holyoke, which will be staged in Middletown, Ct., on Labor Day. The tussle between Gallant and West, which is one of the biggest ring affairs which has been arranged for the "fans" of the Nutmeg State for many years, has aroused a tremendous amount of interest, and is sure to be witnessed by a record-breaking crowd. The bout will be staged in the centre of the big race track, and there will be ample seating accommodations for all those who wish to see the boys exchange broadsides.

SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS By A.H.C. Mitchell

THE Honorable John K. Tener, Governor of Pennsylvania, president of the National League and Solomon therefor, undoubtedly did the right thing when he fined Messrs. Zimmerman, Evers and Maranville for the bloody shirt debauch in the Cub-Giant game on the Chicago ball field Wednesday.

You and I might have decided that the proper thing to do to Zimmerman would be to pull him out of baseball, tie a stone around his neck and drop him off the ferryboat City of Chelsea. In order to bring about this desired result, however, it would first be necessary to bring the Chicagoan player here in a steel cage and under guard of the First Corps of Cadets; otherwise the mob would doubtless lynch him instead of drowning him.

OF COURSE, we have only the telegraphed accounts of the mixup to go on, but taking them as true statements of the scrap, Mr. Zimmerman's punishment would have to be drowning, or lynching, or possibly something like lingering in boiling oil or melted lead, as the Mikado said. If you and I were the judge—

But President Tener has probably done the right thing. Possibly he would have liked to suspend Zimmerman, but if he suspended Zimmerman he would also have to suspend Evers and Maranville. This action would not only knock the stuffing out of the Boston infield, but would injure the Chicago team as well.

WHILE we in Boston are putting most of our thoughts on the Braves, Cards and Giants, it must be remembered that the Cubs are right up there too, and they must be reckoned dangerous until they are pushed further down the National League ladder if they ever are pushed down.

Zimmerman and Evers were fined $100 each, while the Rabbit got off with a soak of $50. Zimmerman will probably lose this amount, but it is doubtful if the fines of the two Boston players ever come out of their pay check. There is a rule in the National League that fines imposed by the president must be collected from the players and turned into the National League treasury and of course this is done regularly. But the chances are that the Boston management will find some way of slipping the coin back to the punished players.

ANYWAY, we all rejoice that neither Evers nor Maranville were forced to take a layoff. The battle for the pennant will continue at fever heat and if the Braves lose they will not have the alibi that a suspension of Evers and the Rabbit robbed them of the flag.

Let the battle for the peaceful possession of the National League championship proceed. The American public understands the battles of baseball better than it understands the battles of armies. Let us be thankful that our battles are confined to the realm of sport.

IN the American League the Red Sox are in second place and continue to win games; the Athletics are in first place and also continue to win games. The season is drawing to a close. All our boys can do is to play their hardest—which they are doing—and trust to Providence that ill befalls the world's champions.

THE Red Sox are playing the "big inning" which they played with such grand success during the season of 1912. It was the "big inning" that won them the championship that year.

Yesterday, against the Tigers, they fell on the delivery of the clever Mons. Dubuc in the sixth round as follows:

Speaker drove a fly ball to the left field bank for two bases. Lewis sacrificed Tris to third. Hoblitzell lined a single to center and Speaker walked home. Janvrin followed with a safe one to right, on which Hobby raced to third. On a double steal Hobby scored, Stanage dropping the ball after touching the runner. Passes to Gardner and Carrigan filled the bases. Collins fanned. With the bases full Hooper met the first ball pitched and drove it screeching to the right field corner for three bases, clearing the sacks. At this point Mons. Dubuc sadly left the box and a young man named McCreery took up the burden. The first ball he handed Scott was pasted to right and Hooper scored. That was all, but it was enough. Six large runs on five hits, including a double and a triple, made the sixth a "big inning."

Charles Brickley Returns for Football

Charles E. Brickley, captain of the Harvard football team, has returned to his home in Everett after spending the Summer as a tutor in the Blue Ridge Camps in Virginia. Brickley is below weight, but expects to regain it by a good rest before he calls out his candidates on September 14. Brickley will visit the athletic offices at Harvard today to talk over football matters, and it is probable that he will take several of the candidates for the backfield positions to the Summer home of Coach Haughton, of Newport, R. I., for preliminary practice.

New England Horses Make Cleanup in Race

FAIRMOUNT, W. Va., Aug. 28.—Three New England horses were money winners in the 2:14 trot here. Worthy Prince, owned by James M. O'Brien, of Lynn, Mass., won the race in three straight heats; James W., owned by Lester Dore of Salem, N. H., won second straight heats; James W., owned by Primie Wright of New Preston, Ct., won third money. The three horses finished in all three heats as the money division went.

St. Louis Lad Hailed as Second Daniels

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 29.—Herman Laubis of this city is considered by aquatic experts to be a likely successor to Charles M. Daniels. He has already covered 440 yards in open water in 5 minutes and 32 3-5 seconds. He has made a good record in many swimming races. Tom Whitaker, the swimming instructor at the Missouri A. C., predicts a great future for the youngster.

"Laubis has everything in his favor —youth, natural ability, plenty of nerve and endurance to burn, and if he trains for a given distance I think he'll be able to beat the world," said Whitaker in speaking of the young swimmer.

Yacht Alice Again Wins Thompson Cup

The Alice won the Thompson Cup for the second time, and the M. & F. II., owned by Camp & Marshall, won the Lipton Cup in Class S. She won this cup in 1912 and 1913.

PICK WILEY TO RETAIN TITLE IN 50-MILE RACE

George Wiley, the present title holder, has been made the favorite in the middle-distance championship race of fifty miles, which will be run off at the Revere Beach cycle track tomorrow evening.

Carman and Mitten are even choices for second place, while Moran and Walthour are about evenly divided for third money.

Wiley and Mitten have shown best over the Marathon distance at the beach track, while both Moran and Walthour have shown their rear tires to the best of them on other tracks over the long route. Carman is a consistent performer in every race, long or short, and says he is out to relieve Wiley of the title this year.

In addition to the big event, Manager Butler has also arranged an attractive list of amateur and professional races.

Worcester Club Star Out for the Season

WORCESTER, Aug. 8.—Carl Fotteiger, outfielder of the Worcester New England team, will probably be out of the game for the remainder of the season. He was injured in a recent game and an X-ray of his right foot and ankle taken shows that a small bone in his right heel is cracked and his physician says he will be unable to play for at least ten days.

Favorites Win Out In Bangor Races

BANGOR, Aug. 28.—The favorites won the feature races at the Eastern Maine State Fair. In the 2:16 pace the black gelding Thomas S. had the race. The 2:30 trot was won by the bay mare Leach Girl.

Ketchel-Gary Draw.

AURORA, Ill., Aug. 28.—Tommy Gary and Steve Ketchel fought a six-round draw here. Gary forced the fighting from the opening gong. He landed time and again with right crosses and left uppercuts, but his blows did not seem to slow up Ketchel.

GETAWAY DAY FOR JENNINGS AND HIS BAND

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

We say good-bye today to the Detroit Tigers, always welcome to Boston and especially welcome when we can win from them. We have won two straight battles from them already and expect to make it three straight this afternoon.

The attendances at the Fenway Park games hold up remarkably well. Spectators at the ball yard have seen some good games lately. The Boston baseball public likes to see a good game of ball, no matter whether pennants are involved or otherwise. It looks like otherwise just now, with the Athletics winning 36 out of the last 41 games they have played.

George Foster may be asked to pitch for the Indians this afternoon, while Dauss may be on the firing line for the Tigers. If these box artists hook up a close game will be looked for.

Tomorrow the St. Louis Browns, the last of the Western clubs, will put in an appearance, after which the Athletics come along. When the Mackmen finish up here there will be no more games at Fenway Park until the last day of September.

The fine weather we are having these days will undoubtedly draw another good-sized crowd to see the final game with the Tigers today.

American Beats Post In Pitching Duel, 1-0

The Boston American team of the Newspaper League clinched its lead on first place by defeating the fast Post team yesterday in a game replete with sensational fielding, by the score of 1 to 0.

The game developed into a pitchers' battle between Woodworth of the American and Edwards of the Post, both pitchers allowing only three hits each. The all-around playing of Wilhan and Flynn of the American team and Mackey and Burns of the Post team were the features. The score:

Post	0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0	3	1

Batteries—Woodworth and Wilhan; Edwards and Glass.

Billy Nash Jailed on Begging Charge

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 28.—William Nash, who said he was formerly a member of the Boston National League baseball team, is under arrest on a charge of begging. Nash said he had met with reverses and had to beg to support his children. He was held for further hearing.

FOUR FEATURE MATCHES TODAY IN TENNIS PLAY

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 28.—Four big matches on the card for decision in the National all-comers' tennis tournament today, when Touchard meets Fottrell, William plays Behr, Griffin and Washburn clash, while Griffin is pitted against McLoughlin.

In addition to these McCormick, of the Pacific coast, and Beekman, of New York, will fight it out for the interscholastic title.

Chief interest yesterday centered in the match between Karl Behr and R. Lindley Murray which was won by the former, 3—6, 6—2, 7—5, 3—6, 6—4.

Murray won the opening set on his terrific service, which completely puzzled his opponent, but Behr came back in the second and won through his beautiful placements. Behr was also returned the victor in the third set after a hard tussle. Murray again broke through Behr's service in the fourth set and in spite of a desperate rally, managed to triumph. The fifth and final set was thrilling to the very end, when Murray tired and allowed his opponent to win the last game, 1—0.

The pacing sweepstake, was a gift for Frank Bogash, Jr., with the gray warrior, Earl Jr., second each time, giving Cox one first and two second moneys in the three races.

"Twilight Sleep"

the New Hope for

The World's Mothers

The Freiburg Experiments Likely to Lead to the Emancipation of American Women from the Curse of Eden

By ADA PATTERSON

HOPE has moved nearer to certainty since a month ago. I wrote on this page of "twilight sleep," the soothing, somnolent name the Germans have given to the motherhood that is without fear and without pain.

An associate of Dr. Kronig and Dr. Krauss in the hospital connected with the University of Freiburg, which is the cradle for the hope for maternity unattended by danger and unaccompanied by pain, has come to America and worked in both public and private hospitals. He reports that at the Jewish Maternity Hospital in New York he has handled 115 cases and that 85 per cent. of them have been successful, that is, that of those 85 among 100 not one mother realized the process that has heretofore been inseparable from agony.

A prominent surgeon tells me that he is looking forward with confidence to a twilight sleep case next week. "I shall use one-half suggestive therapeutics, the physician's term for Christian Science, and one-half sedatives," he said. "I am confident my patient will have a painless ordeal."

Demand for a method that will save maternity from its danger and tragedy is so strong that it has become insistent and not to be denied if it is in human power to satisfy it. In answer to this two physicians were sent by the American Gynecological Club to Freiburg to learn of the physicians who have succeeded in a large sense in making the process of maternity what the name promises, an untroubled dream awakening from which woman finds herself wearing the crown of motherhood.

They have returned, and one of them, Dr. John Polak, of the Long Island College Hospital, says: "I have made three visits for study to the Frauenklinik connected with the University of Freiburg, and I am convinced that the claim of Kronig and Krauss is true. There is not any doubt that they have done all they are said to have done."

What will interest every woman of any age is what he further says: "there is no reason why it should not be as successful in America as in Germany. They have been more successful there than we have because they have been more persistent. They have mastered the technique.

"Of two facts I am assured, and they are of prime importance. One is that the method of sparing women the agony of that ordeal is not impossible to the American woman. She is of different temperament and will, therefore, require different preparation and dosage. Her more nervous nature does not prohibit the twilight sleep. An exceedingly nervous American woman, who was at the Frauenklinik as my patient, came through her experience with splendid results.

"Another fact that must not for a moment be forgotten is that this is no treatment to be given at the homes. It is essentially a matter for the hospital, because it requires constant vigilance, and that can only be given by a hospital organization."

NO SUCH FOR POOR

WOMEN TO DESPAIR.

Nor need the woman who is poor or of moderate means be discouraged by the hospital bogie that haunts so many minds—the bogie of expense. "The poor women and those who can have the benefit of it," said the man who brought the tidings of great joy across the sea. "Women in moderate circumstances are willing to go to hospitals. It is the rich women who want to be treated at home who will miss the twilight sleep. There is nothing that will make it more impracticable for the woman in humble walks. The doors of the hospital are open to her."

Three hospitals are open to them in the East. They are the Long Island College Hospital of Brooklyn and the Post-Graduate and Lying-in hospitals of New York.

To Western women the opportunity is offered through Dr. Ruben Peterson at Ann Arbor, who is attached to the Michigan Medical College, and who was another doctor student sent by the American Gynecological Club to the little city that may be blessed by all women.

At Buffalo on September 16 the American Association of Gynecologists and Obstetricians will discuss the methods of robbing maternity of its physical horrors. A physician who has been quietly at work at the private hospital, in conjunction with a physician from the Freiburg Hospital, for six months, will report his discoveries and conclusions.

Its is eager to give to the world the result of these discoveries, but he must wait upon the slow and halting footsteps of professional etiquette, the old fogyism that handicaps the progress of one of the world's problems, if professions as a hobbie skirt does a woman.

Other methods than that which has five thousand healthy and happy mothers to attest to its efficacy will be advocated. It is but natural that while the Germans are making the discovery that may revolutionize the world for mothers, their long-time foes, the French, should be making marches along the road of new promises to be a great truth.

Professor Alban Thiemont-Dasaigne, head of the department of obstetrics in the famous Beaujon Hospital in Paris, and the greatest authority on the processes and perils of motherhood, has announced that he has discovered a form of treatment whereby the nightmare of apprehension would be forever banished from maternity. Enthusiastic commentators greeted the announcement with joyful belief. It was said of him that he had blue-pencilled the Edenic curse, that he had expunged from Genesis the decree, "In sorrow thou shalt bring forth children." He was said to have robbed writers of a favorite and melancholy phrase, "The martyrdom of motherhood."

WHAT THE EXPERIMENTS, IN GERMANY PROVED.

In Freiburg Doctors Kronig and Krauss have shown the truly scientific spirit tinctured with the humane. Dr. Polak, paying a visit for observation in 1909, found the physicians inducing that state of suspension of memory, balanced by active will and muscular control, which is the twilight sleep, by giving injections of scopolamin, a derivative of snake-root, and morphine. On his second visit, in 1912, the physicians were gratified but not satisfied by results, and they were seeking a blend of the drugs which should contain no possibility of over-excitement of the patient.

In 1914 he has found they were using narkophin, derived from opium, and refined scopalamin. These, injected in varying proportions, according to the needs of the particular patient, he announces have produced "practically perfect results."

Any dangers that might attend the treatment he believes can be "foreseen and avoided by periodic examinations and by the incessant vigilance possible only in a hospital organization."

The Frenchman's announcement is less candidly gnadic. "A liquid in which chloroform is compounded with certain ferments which deprives the chloroform of its formidable poisoning qualities by a curious biological process" is administered to the patient by injection. Thus he describes what some of his fellow practitioners in Paris agree is revolutionary and may become the salvation of dread-ridden prospective mothers.

Objections? Yes, some physicians make them, and there is no doubt that there will be hot debate and fierce oral duels at Buffalo. No one, even the most ardent of the enthusiasts, will deny that the doctors and the mothers must proceed with caution. The mother must be sure of her doctor. The doctor must be sure of the soundness of his theory. He must remember his Hippocratic oath and the preciousness of the apparently most insignificant life.

Eminent practitioners are weighing judicially the claims of the German and French obstetricians. Dr. Charles A. Dana, that eminent authority on the causes of deranged minds, even when those causes have been for three or more generations, raises no objection to the twilight illumination upon the child of the alleged ultra-nervousness of the mother under the Freiburg treatment. He told me this:

"I am not an obstetrician, and I am not thoroughly familiar with the technique of the twilight sleep. But as far as scopolamin is concerned, it is a harmless drug, even in small doses. A certain percentage of adults are anaphalactic to it, however, and cannot bear even a small dose of it, so it always make small obeisance to it before prescribing it."

A well-known American nurse said of it: "Being a nurse your article on the twilight sleep prompt appealed to me. A physician for whom I have handled many cases, some obstetrical, makes two such injections.

"The first soothes. After the second a leg could be cut off and there would be no pain or realization of it. The patient may sleep for hours, but not always, is usually fully conscious, the eyes open, the patient looking and perhaps talking with you, but all have been splendidly successful."

Thus the doctors and the nurses. What of the women? What can they do?

A physician spoke a great truth when he said: "It is simple. They can demand. Demand! and they will reply. The twilight sleep is like anything applied to civilization. Patients no longer give up and die of fright when they hear the name, they simply say, 'Let me have the twilight sleep,' and they are."

This wave of interest in the medical profession may pass and other scientific interests may succeed it. It may be lost upon the shore of forgotten and Neglected Things, unless women make their demands heard and make it with a determination that cannot be withstood.

There are methods of making motherhood painless. What do you know about them?" are questions you may ask her physician, and if every woman patient asks that question of every physician, the wave of interest is too busy to look into it" will be lost in the clamor of demand in approval and contralto voices.

If the women demand it, the hospitals will provide for its study. Physicians will travel across the continents to study and if their patients demand they must know.

If there is a way to spare women the agonies Eve foreshadowed in the cruel passage in Genesis, women want it, and it should have been written particularly of women, "Where there's a will there's a way."

Gowns of Artistic Taste and Effective Style

This skirt with its lines of small box plaits is a forerunner of the unrest that is going to give us something totally new in Fall models. With this plaited skirt the pretty French woman, who is sponsor for it, wears a modified sailor blouse. Collar and cuffs are of white broadcloth piped in the sage green taffeta of which the dress is fashioned.

A flat tie of the broadcloth slips through a band of the taffeta and breaks the line of the waist in front.

Nothing more charming for the week-end could be designed than this Paris creation of indigold and blue charmeuse. The long, fitted sleeves are set into stitched buttonholes and trimmed by false buttonholes and silk buttons trimmed by false buttonholes and silk buttons in exactly the fashion used on either side of the deep V-shaped cut of the simple blouse.

The girdle is filled in by a wide crush of white charmeuse following the V in its cut. A draped girdle falls at the right side in long tasselled ends.

Marine blue taffeta is used for this afternoon frock that is produced by a French dressmaker who makes a point of conforming to modest American taste. It has the welcome feature of fulness at the feet, so it does very well for the practical service needed from a week-end frock. The waist is a jumper with plain narrow revers of bayadere satin striped in subdued blue, taupe and cream. The underskirt is a wide envelope crossing which at the front and edged in a bias fold.—OLIVETTE.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"AND so you was out fishing yesterday, George?" said the Manicure Lady. "I'm sorry that you didn't have no luck. You ought to go some day with my dad. The old gent is a regular Izaak Walt-ingford, or whatever was the name of that old time fisherman. He has the slickest method of catching trout that you ever seen."

"I wish I had known it yesterday," said the Head Barber. "I was out wading in a stream all day long and all I got was two little minnows that I had to throw back. Some time your old man is going I would like to go along."

"You can go with father most any holiday," said the Manicure Lady. "Wait till I tell you how he gets the big fish, George. He goes to some trout stream and finds a deep pool, and then he sinks some of his bait. He has a goldfish globe with about twenty little shiners in it and a piece of wire netting tied tight across the mouth of the bowl. Then he lets this down about three feet into the water on a rope, fastened to a anchor or a stake, and goes back to the shore and fishes from the bank. He uses them shiners for bait, the same as the ones in the globe. The big trout see them little shiners swimming around in the glass globe and they come from all directions to get a square meal. Of course they can't get at the shiners in the globs, but they go for the lone shiner on my old gent's hook, and he yanks them out as fast as he drops in. The trick ain't original with the old man—it was told to him by a gent named Jim Dick of Worcester, but original or not, he sure brings home the trout. No use talking, George, one has got to have brains in this world if one wants to succeed at anything."

"That sounds like a pretty good stunt, but I don't think it is very sportsmanlike," declared the Head Barber.

"What do you care about that, if you get the fish," asked the Manicure Lady. "Goodness knows, George, that's the world ain't going to think any more of a barber if it happens to find out that he wouldn't do nothing unsportsmanlike. There is unsportsmanlike things being did all around us all of the time, and I would think that if you come home with your basket full of trout that would be enough. There wouldn't nobody ask you how you caught them, and if they did ask you it would be easy enough for a married man like you to lie about it."

"I ain't much of a hand to lie," said the Head Barber. "I believe the same as Minster Roosevelt that telling the truth is the easiest way."

"I don't doubt Minster Roosevelt tells the truth when it is the easiest way," replied the Manicure Lady, "but you was talking about being sportsmanlike. I don't see how a gent that spends all of his spare change in the poolrooms betting on some skate that finishes fourth in a four horse race can see his way clear to pick out what is and what isn't sportsmanlike. Goodness knows you can't get very many ideas on the subject from touts."

"Well, anyhow," said the Head Barber, "I want to go fishing some day with your dad. I suppose he wouldn't object if I was to take along a little bottle for him?"

"Object?" exclaimed the Manicure Lady. "Way, George, father would fairly beam on you!"

In Which Constance Discovers a Mystery in the Dark

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

MRS. HALE seemed inclined to linger longer than usual over the coffee. She had made calls in the afternoon and told happily of what she had heard and seen upon her expedition.

"I was so sorry you were not well enough to accompany me," she said to her niece.

Constance smiled wanly in appreciation of this remark.

"But you are still pale," her aunt observed.

John Hale saw in this speech an opportunity to suggest leaving the table. He wanted to telephone to Tom, but did not wish to betray this fact to his wife.

"Perhaps Constance's head would be better in a cooler room than this," he ventured.

His wife agreed with him at once. "Why, of course!" she exclaimed. "I have been sitting here talking of myself while I might better have been thinking of other people's comfort."

As the betrothed pair and Mrs. Hale moved on into the library, Constance opened the front door and listened there a moment. The air felt good upon her heated forehead. As she stood thus she was aware that her uncle was telephoning to someone.

"I insist that you come!" he was saying peremptorily. "Yes, I know it's past 8 now. But take your car and come out. I shall expect you, Tom! I don't care if you don't arrive until 10—I shall be waiting for you."

So Tom was coming here tonight! Constance thought with a dull surprise.

A stealthy step made her turn. Ralph was just re-entering the library. He had come out into the hall unheard by her, she appreciated swiftly. Then he, too, had heard her uncle's summons to Tom.

"Constance!" Mrs. Hale called. "Where are you dear."

"Here I am," the girl replied, going into the library.

"I just wanted to ask how your head is now," her aunt said. "These young people are going out on the veranda. Your uncle and I will be glad to have you sit here with us."

ASKS TO BE EXCUSED

"Thank you," Constance said. "But if you will excuse me, I will go to my room soon. Perhaps my head will be improved by rest and darkness."

"Headaches are very queer things," Ralph assumed patronizingly, with an effort to speak as if he and Constance were on distant terms. But as the girl did not reply, and Edith did not second his remark, he changed the subject and told an amusing story at which his fiancee smiled and her mother laughed immoderately.

Yet Constance saw that there was a restless expression in his eyes and that he replied absent-mindedly to some question his hostess asked him with unusual nonchalance.

"Might I," he asked, "use your telephone for a moment? I've just remembered a matter I should have spoken to my man about before I left home."

"Certainly," Mr. Hale returned graciously. "You know where the instrument is."

"Why, he really going to call on his home?" Constance wondered slowly. "Or has he decided suddenly that he has relatives good night, she passed through the hall on her way to her room and heard Ralph ask some one at his house to tell Peter to come to the telephone. She seemed destined to overhear telephone communications, she mused as she hurried on unwilling ears before anything more could reach her ears. Then she closed the door of her room and crowded out by her unhappiness.

While Mr. and Mrs. John Hale were seated in the library, reading, as was their custom at this hour, and Ralph and Edith had gone out upon the veranda, the lonely girl sat in the dark trying to quiet her nervous fears and look her own situation squarely in the face. But much thinking brought no solution of her problem or checked the dread of the future that possessed her. At last, with a feeling of breathlessness, she threw open the window and, dropping on her knees by it, drew in great breaths of the fragrant night air. The sky was thick with stars, for the moon was not yet risen. It would be nearly eleven before it would be up.

SHE IS GREATLY PERPLEXED

Kneeling there Constance remembered Emerson's familiar lines—lines she had often heard her father repeat:

"Teach me your mood, O patient stars!"

she whispered, then stopped. Patient! Yes, they could afford to be patient, she reflected. Their courses were planned for them; their places were assigned them by the laws of the universe. But she was only a poor atom, she told herself. When the young are wretched, they are very wretched. It takes a long while to learn that the effect of pain on the character is a greater thing than the pain itself—and that what that effect shall be rests with God and the sufferer himself.

Whom could she trust? this girl demanded of her soul. Of course there were her uncle and her aunt, but they would be governed by their daughter's judgment, so she could no longer count on them. She had no human counsellor!

Then all at once she remembered Tom. He was her friend. Yet she had no right to turn to him at this juncture. What was she to say to him or to her? Even as she asked herself this question she was conscious of a sense of comfort. She did not pause to analyze it. A normal girl is not, as a rule, given to analysis. All this one knew now was that she could never doubt Tom Morton, that his stood for more in her little world than did anyone else.

Folding her arms on the window sill, she dropped her head upon them, and knelt motionless. The stars shone on calmly; the soft wind murmured drowsily in the trees. A clock somewhere in the village struck nine.

Suddenly Constance Medford was startled by a gentle stir on the walk beneath her window. Her room was at the side of the house, and the narrow path ran between two rows of shrubbery. She sat up, suddenly affright she peered out into the darkness.

A man was standing down there in the shadows, waiting. For whom?

A Message to Thin, Weak, Scrawny Folks

An Easy Way to Gain 10 to 30 Lbs. of Solid, Healthy, Permanent Flesh

Thin, scrawny men, undeveloped men and women everywhere are heard to say, "I can't understand why I do not get fat. I eat plenty of good, nourishing food." The reason is plain: You cannot get fat, no matter how much you eat, unless your digestive organs assimilate the fat-making elements of your food instead of passing them out through the body as waste.

What is needed is a means of gently urging the assimilative functions of the stomach and intestines to absorb the fat-making elements in them over to the blood, where they belong, and then carried to the fat-storing tissues and build them up. Fatmeal is the new discovery in the sponge—eager and hungry for the fatty materials of which the body is being deprived by the failure of the alimentary canal to take them from the food. Eat Fatmeal with cream (this simple waste of flesh building material) and in a few days some of fats to use Sargol, the recently discovered fat-assimilative tonic that is recommended so highly by physicians from coast to coast. Take a little Sargol tablet with every meal and notice how quickly your cheeks fill out and color and look how your own situation squarely in the face. But much thinking brought no solution of her problem or checked the dread of the future that possessed her. At last, with a feeling of breathlessness, she threw open the window and, dropping on her knees by it, drew in great

This is quite inexpensive, no matter how soiled or discolored the complexion. The wax literally peels off the tan, sunburn or freckles, and the lovely young skin beneath. The process is entirely harmless, so little of the wax need be used at a time. Mercolized wax is obtainable at any drug store; one ounce usually suffices. ROADS LIFT EMBARGO ON EXPORTS

By W. H. ROSS.
Financial Editor.

Every day confidence spreads that all financial and business obstacles will be overcome and that this country has before it an era of great prosperity. Some people predict it will be the greatest ever known. The bankers have not yet made the readjustment of foreign credits which is so much needed in order to start things, and commercial conditions are awaiting events. Good news from Chicago is that the embargo on export freight has been lifted by practically all Western roads.

WHEAT THE FEATURE.

At present wheat is a financial feature when in taking the census of the acreage this country has grown 1,000,000 more bushels this year than last, plentitude has been made for prices, of course the high quotations are due to war, to unprecedented present demand and the prospect that the world supply will be limited within a few months to meet wheat growing countries the crop has been small this year. The shortage is estimated at 100,000,000 bushels. The prospect of a long war is fostering wild speculation. Reports received have been great and it is likely that violent bumps and declines will continue. While the grain bills are increasing in supply, foreign exchange rates continue to differ. The export movement has not as yet regulated exchange to the extent it is hoped for, but, it is believed, shipments of grain and other commodities on a large scale must have the effect desired before long. At the worst and it is natural there should be quite a strong demand for remittances. Grains were weak at Chicago today when the Board of Trade opened. Wheat was off a cent, corn declined 1¾ and oats were ¾ to ⅞ lower.

EXPORTS ARE A HELP.

The increasing volume of exports is helping out the foreign credits situation, although English and American bankers have not come to an understanding as to exchange. American bankers want the British to establish a balance in New York in returns for credits at London sufficient to meet the obligations of this country as they mature. The British bankers do not like to draw heavily on the United States for gold. American bankers are disposed to permit withdrawals to some, but not to a large extent. Still exports are growing in volume to a degree which is helping materially to settle the difficulty by reducing this country's debt to Europe. Most of the shipments to the United Kingdom now are grains, but later there will be a demand there for cotton, and possibly metals. It is expected that enough exchange will accumulate by September 1 to care for obligations maturing then. By the middle of October it is believed that exports will have been in such quantity as to lessen the debt to Europe that Europe was preparing for war during July is indicated by the circumstance that for the month we shipped foodstuffs valued at $29,760,000 to that part of the world, or $25,000,000 more than such exports for the same 1912 month totalled, and more than double what was shipped in July a year ago. Last month's wheat exports totalled $25,844,000, compared with $9,695,182 in July, 1913.

TO CANCEL MORATORIUM?

It is cabled from London that Lloyd George, Chancellor of the exchequer, intends to cancel the present moratorium by introducing in Parliament a measure for a modified one. His bill will provide that creditors may sue debtors, but that debtors need not pay until after the war ends, if they can prove that inability to settle is due to the great conflict. London bankers are not pleased by the proposition, as if such a law is passed they cannot continue to refuse to allow customers to withdraw more than 10 per cent. of deposits without obtaining court permission. Neither can collateral be sold for unpaid loans, unless the sale has effort sanction. It is stated that the chancellor will give banks special credit facilities. If they will render adequate loans in assistance to trade.

END OF STRIFE AND WAR NEAR, SAYS FORBES

Every philosopher a bull.

Every day brings us nearer the end of the war.

Every day sees America draw to the forefront of the world's industrial nations.

Every day helps to straighten out international financial tangles.

Every day carries us forward toward the possession of a thousand marine worthy of our $4,500,000,000 annual foreign commerce.

Every day witnesses the setting in motion of American brains to make the nation more self-supporting.

Every day the movement for "Made in America" goods makes splendid progress.

Every day lays foundations for the ultimate employment of a vastly greater army of skilled workers than this land has ever yet known.

Every day additional measures are taken to insure beyond shadow of doubt that no scarcity of currency will arise in any quarter of the Commonwealth.

Every day paves the way for the resumption of normal mercantile exchanges.

Every day takes us one day nearer the reopening of the country's stock exchanges.

Every day increases Europe's need for foodstuffs.

Every day entails heavy consumption of cotton that will help Europe's 20,000,000 men-at-arms.

Every day emphasizes the blessings of peace enjoyed by America and the horrors of the war now devastating and bleaching Europe.

Every day thins the ranks of our unfortunate fellow-country folk stranded abroad.

Every day strengthens the national resolution to "See America First."

Every day intensifies the patriotism of Americans and gives them fresh cause for loving their own land, for it is the country that supplies the oil in the coffin of despotism abroad.

Every day brings nearer the sovereignty of Europe's billion-odd subjects.

Every day steels mankind in its determination to forever slay the hell-bred monster War.

Every day tends to usher in the oneness—the brotherhood—of the human family.

Every day turns man's mind from the fluxility of things earthly to the abiding consolations of things higher.

So, my fellows, all things considered, though the atmosphere today is laden with the fumes of gunpowder and the earth is being soaked in blood like unto our own, yet will there dawn a day, fairer tomorrow.

Instead of the rule of iron will we see ushered in the rule of democracy of humanity.

The tocsin that summoned Europe to war sounds, too, the death-knell, the deathknell of organized, legalized national savagery.

From Europe's blood-drenched ruins and soil will spring a more enduring, a more humane, a more satisfying civilization.

It will be America's proud task to demonstrate to re-born Europe the glories and infinite possibilities of pure, applied democracy.

For Blood Eruptions That Linger For Years

How They Are Closed, Cleansed and Healed Never to Return.

Almost anywhere you go people become painfully reminiscent to tell you how years ago they used S. S. S. for blood eruptions and were entirely cured. Such famous medicine removed all impurities, and the blood in its healthy condition so that pimples, boils, rash, eczema and all eruptive conditions just naturally went.

And the people to tell the story clear, healthy complexions because S. S. S. went to the sources of impure blood, drove out the acids and stopped the accumulation, cleared the membranous catarrhal infection, and said the kidneys, lungs and liver to remove worn and rebel poisons in the blood. Nor does it matter what its nature or by what name it is known. S. S. S. drives it out if it is a blood trouble and most if health is a blood sickness.

Even those defiant cases that resist such strong drugs as mercury, arsenic or iodide of potash gave way completely to the overpowering effect of S. S. S. in the blood.

It is acceptable to even very weak stomachs because no one need despair of getting rid of disfiguring blood eruptions. The action of S. S. S. is direct; it works outwardly in accordance with nature's tendencies, and is an ideal tonic for example a blind horse runs and shies.

The action of S. S. S. is such that fresh forming material is rapidly developed, and the blood is soon restored to the center where the skin takes on a new healthy, lovely appearance.

Now, this same process goes on all over the body when S. S. S. circulates with the blood wherever it goes. Many interesting facts are more fully explained in the book written for a specialist which is mailed free by the makers of S. S. S., The Swift Specific Co., 29 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Ask at any drug store for a bottle of S. S. S., but don't accept a substitute. The medicinal merit of The Swift Specific Co. has been of inestimable value in blood affections in which correct, and quick advice and help for every complete and a splendid aid to all who are in doubt and perplexed about their trouble.

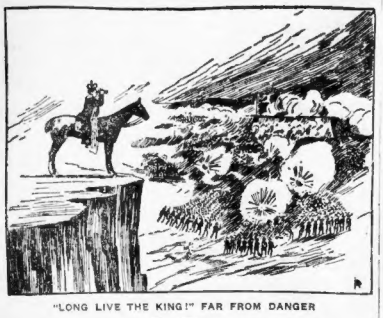
The King Far Away

No Wonder He Can Enjoy Battle and Philosophize About Death

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company



"LONG LIVE THE KING!" FAR FROM DANGER

This little picture expresses a modern thought about war.

It is a thought that will grow in Europe as the days go by and the number of deaths increases.

"Oh, the brave music of a distant drum!"

"Oh, the high courage of a distant king!"

"Go and kill each other," says the ruler, "and add glory to my name."

And for centuries human beings have obeyed the order—they have killed each other and the king has had the glory.

But the little people have had about enough of this. They have gone and killed each other over and over, and over and over again.

They are tired of it.

Seen from a distance, war is interesting, gunpowder fascinating, battle fascinating.

But to the peasant in the front line who hears the word "CHARGE," and never hears another word this side of the grave, it is not quite so interesting.

"Go, fight and add to my glory," the kings have said.

Soon the people will say, "Go you and fight and see how you like it."

There will be fewer kings, ladies and gentlemen, when this war is over. And some of those who have set other men fighting to add glory to their names, or to avenge personal insult, will find that the day has gone by when the king could stand apart from danger and collect the glory.

Men READ and THINK today. They used to PRAY and OBEY.

MEN HAVE IMPROVED, and what Frederick the Great called "Le metier des rois" (the trade of kings) will prove to be no longer as profitable a trade as it was once.

Let the Mayor Profit by the Example of the Council

The people of Boston have been saved from a great loss by the intelligent members of the City Council. The AMERICAN thanks Councilmen Attridge, Watson, McDonald and Coleman for protecting the pockets of the citizens of Boston against the raid which Mr. Curley and the Edison Electric Light Company planned to make upon the city treasury. By a decisive vote of 4 to 2, the City Council rejected the Mayor's electric lighting contract.

The AMERICAN pointed out from the very beginning the evil features of this contract and its utter inconsistency with Mayor Curley's pretence of economy. It was a bad deal from almost every point of view. It gave the Edison Electric Light Company, a prosperous corporation, paying dividends of 12 per cent., perhaps $100,000 a year more than it ought to have for the lighting of our public streets, and the loss during the life of the contract might have been a million dollars.

It tied up the city to a ten-year contract at a fixed price, when improvements in the art of electric lighting is every day reducing the cost of the service. It had a deceitful scheme for arbitration in which the city was certain to lose everything and the Edison Electric Light Company to lose nothing.

The City Council has very wisely voted not only to reject this PROPOSED contract, but also to terminate the EXISTING contract with the Edison Company.

The AMERICAN hopes that Mr. Curley has learned his lesson and will understand now that he cannot, by annexing John A. Sullivan, and by discharging workmen and nurses and matrons and other helpless people on small salaries, acquire a reputation as a reformer under cover of which he can "PULL OFF" such deals as this electric lighting contract.

While Mr. Curley is in office the AMERICAN wants him to make a good Mayor, for the city's sake. Therefore we hope that he will take this lesson to heart and become a real reformer and seek to save the city money by HONEST economy. He may begin well by accepting the vote of the City Council, who were wiser than he, and by acting promptly in providing for the recision of the present extortionate contract with the Edison Electric Illuminating Company.

Councilmen Ballantyne and Woods must feel very lonely in their strange friendship for the Edison Electric Light Company. It would be a good thing for the people of Boston to keep an eye on these two worthies.

Once more we congratulate the seven members of the City Council and urge the Mayor to profit by their honorable example.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

A NOTE OF APPRECIATION

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—We have noticed with great pleasure the fair and unbiased tendency displayed both in your news reports and in your editorials.

Inasmuch as we ask for nothing more than a square deal so far as the German point of view is concerned, we herewith beg to inform you of our sincere appreciation of your attitude, and we can only hope that other newspapers will soon avail themselves of similar fair play methods.

A SPLENDID SERVICE

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—I have been following with much interest the splendid effort you are making for a merchant marine. It is humiliating to see this great country of ours, with such vast resources and wealth, robbed of its birthright on the seas.

I trust the splendid service you are rendering the American people at this time will bring forth fruit a hundred-fold to the glory and happiness of us all.

A SERVICE TO MANKIND

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Permit me, and my brothers, business associates and friends, to congratulate you upon the manly, fearless and unbiased stand you have taken in publishing uncolored news of the war situation. It shows again your undaunted courage.

Our fellow citizens are sure to realize the service you have performed and are giving to this country and mankind.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox —ON— Charity—Don't Send Money to Foreign Missions Until Every Town in America Is Equipped with Free Hospital Accommodations, She Says.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

LET us not send any more money to foreign missions until every town in America of ten thousand inhabitants is equipped with best possible free hospital accommodations.

Accommodations which will make it possible for every poor man, woman or child who falls ill of any malady, contagious or otherwise, to receive the best of care without expense.

Connecticut is famed for its liberality to foreign missions. It supports many missionaries in various parts of the Orient and is ever solicitous for the welfare of the heathen.

In a small resort near New Haven the child of a poor mother fell ill. The mother, to support the child and three others, kept a boarding house and had little money to spare. The physician declared the malady to be contagious.

The house must be closed and placarded, he said, or the child sent to a hospital.

Friends rallied to the scene, and the telephone was kept busy between the Summer resort and the New Haven hospitals.

Friends of the Mother Came to Rescue and Raised Amount

And this was the result: NO POSSIBLE PLACE COULD BE FOUND WHERE THIS SICK CHILD COULD BE TREATED UNDER TWENTY-EIGHT DOLLARS A WEEK.

Finally friends of the mother came to her rescue and raised the necessary amount.

But what a commentary it is upon churches that so much money goes to the propagating of various creeds in distant countries while such a crying need exists at home.

Private homes (unless they are homes of large wealth) are not places for sick people. Homes are for health. Hospitals are for the sick. And every town should be provided with hospitals for the benefit of those who have not ample means with which to supply the needs of the possible victim of illness or accident.

In this great hour of trouble and disaster which hangs over the whole world, we must not forget individual needs. In our sorrow for the soldiers and their families abroad we must not lose sight of the sick and the needy and the lonely in our midst.

And we must not permit ourselves to dwell upon thoughts of poverty and loss, or imagine that we have nothing to bestow upon the poor, because the food trusts are increasing the price of living.

Here is an inspiring bit of writing from the Unity Columns; read it and practice and believe it and cast out fear:

"Many persons complain of their financial straits without realizing that it is this very complaint which fastens the condition upon them. 'As a man thinketh, so is he,' is an absolute law. Knowing this, the wise one looks within his mind for the source of his troubles and, discovering the specific idea at fault, he turns about in his thinking and takes the opposite course.

If One Wants Prosperity He Must Think, Talk and Expect It

"Reasoning from this premise it is but natural to conclude that if one wants prosperity he must THINK and TALK and EXPECT prosperity and abundance constantly, and then there will be no room in his mind for thoughts of lack with their productive quality for adverse conditions. We certainly create conditions for ourselves according to the character of our habitual thought. The confident, expectant attitude of mind opens a channel for the coming of that which is looked for.

"Every individual should exercise a systematic method of thought, purpose and practice if he would gain the end desired. To think prosperity today and poverty tomorrow creates a dual state of mind which brings into manifestation conditions in which both plenty and lack appear.

"There is no power which can prevail against the God-given righteous will. The 'I Will,' when spoken from the Christ consciousness, precludes failure. This righteous, intelligent 'I Will,' belongs in the inner kingdom of the soul, and is in constant touch with the Spirit which always guides aright. There is no hesitancy, all doubt is banished, and the individual claims with undaunted faith that abundance, yes, opulence, which is his of his Father.

Five Powerful Will Statements to Meditate on

"We will use these powerful 'I Will' statements for our meditation this week:

"'I Will know that God is my only source of supply.'

"'I Will thank God daily for the prosperity constantly manifesting for me.'

"'I Will praise God that I recognize that I am one with Him in the riches of His Kingdom.'

"'I Will glorify God in the beauty of wholeness in my body, soul and spirit, and my affairs.'

"'I Will be that which I Will to be.'"

Germany Always a Friend of the United States

By THEODORE SUTRO

Editor of the New York German Journal.

AMONG the leading nations of the world Germany is the only one that has had no war for the last forty-four years.

Russia and Japan were fighting only a few years ago. Previous to that Japan had her war with China, and Russia her war with Turkey.

France and Italy had their wars in northern Africa. England had her struggle with the Boers.

The United States and Spain were at war in 1898. Portugal had a civil war. Chili and Peru had their war. There was civil strife in Brazil.

Bulgaria, Servia and Greece have been at war more than once. So has little Montenegro. Austria-Hungary had the occupation of Bosnia. Mexico has been one large battlefield for over a year.

Germany Alone Among Big Nations Has Kept Peace 44 Years

Germany alone among the big nations of the world has kept her peace for forty-four years. And for twenty-six out of these forty-four years a so-called war lord has been the Emperor of Germany.

England, France and Russia charge Germany with having started a great European war. Germany denies having been the aggressor.

History will decide this point, and in the meantime it behooves Americans to reserve their judgment.

Germans Have Helped to Build Up America's Great Cities

Americans never had any trouble with Germany or with any German state. Prussia was the first of all nations to recognize the independence of the United States. Prussia sent us Friedrich Wilhelm von Steuben to organize the army that finally drove the British from these shores.

Germans have helped to build up America's cities, they have cultivated American soil, they have established American industries, encouraged commerce, fostered art and promoted civic righteousness. They have always been loyal defenders of their adopted country—the United States.

Every reader of every American newspaper personally knows some Germans. He works side by side with them, trades with them, meets them in the street, in church, in clubs, in every walk of life.

The average American realizes the Germans are not ogres who eat children for breakfast, or cutthroats who infest dark alleys with a gun in one hand and a lead pipe in the other.

The Germans who have made America their home are the same ordinary, every-day human beings as their brothers and cousins now fighting in Europe for their hearths and homes, their mothers, wives and children.

Americans to Be Neutral in True Sense of the Word

The Germans who are now struggling for the very existence of their country are the same ordinary, sociable human beings as the average home-loving Americans who are proud of their country and ready to fight for its flag.

Americans have no reason to hate Germans or Germany. The United States has had two wars with England and do not hate the British people. Americans have had no war with Germany, so they have still less cause for ill will toward Germans.

Americans will be neutral, in the true sense of the word. They will not pass judgment before both sides have had a full hearing.

Let us remain strictly impartial, with malice toward none and charity for all.

From Millions to Mincemeat

How the Beautiful Nathalie Schenck Collins Laimber Has Overcome the Tragedies That Threatened to Wreck Her Life

Beautiful and once wealthy, she is now making mincemeat and preserves to support herself and her three children.

In her little white house, the former Newport belle works eighteen hours a day so that her children may have a home.

Saturday's child, you know, must work for a living. When she was a little girl, surrounded by every luxury, Nathalie Schenck used to laugh and repeat this saying, which in her case came true.

And, incidentally, she says that her three children will be trained some profession, something that will be easier than preserving and canning.
